

How can Krishna hanker for human offerings if he is atmaram?

Lord is self satisfied. Bhakti is part of his self.

Bhakti is the only thing the living entity owns and Krishna becomes very happy when Jiva offers it to Him.

Krshna alone is the object of pure love

Different languages may not use the same words to describe Krishna, Vrindavana, the gopas and gopis, the cows, Yamuna and the kadamba trees, but persons interested in pure love must accept some name, place, form and pastimes, denoting a similar world and God, in some way, using some words.

Morality

Rules for maintaining lives generally formulated by people who don't believe in God

Moral codes that express belief in God and oblige service to Him are fit for mankind

If it does not include thought of God, it can't accomplish any good to humanity
